

Circular route

- 1 To start, either drive along a narrow road to the small car park near Martindale church - CA10 2NF. From here, follow the zig-zag grass path heading straight up until you reach the top.
- 2 Or leave your car at Pooley Bridge and catch a ride aboard the Ullswater Steamer to Howtown.
- 3 From the car park opposite the church, it is a straightforward half an hour walk to the summit. A great little walk for smaller children with panoramic views.
- 4 When you depart the Ullswater Steamer at the jetty at Howtown, cross over the bridge and follow the wooden signs to Sandwick. You'll follow a drystone wall to your right, then begin to climb the base of the fell.
- 5 Go through a gate and bear left along the base of the fell – the trail runs roughly parallel to the road. The path gradually bears right climbing up the side of the fell.
- 6 After a while you'll reach a fork in the path, take the right-hand uphill fork, following another drystone wall. From here it's a straight 20-30 min climb to the top of the fell. The official peak is marked by a large stone obelisk monument. This is a landmark that can be seen clearly from the lake and surrounding area.
- 7 Once you've taken in the view, retrace your steps back down the fell the same way you came, heading back to the car park.

ANOTHER PLACE

Walking in the Lake District comes with risk and conditions change quickly. We would always recommend checking the weather forecast, wearing suitable clothes and choosing a walk for your ability. We would also recommend taking an OS map and compass and know how to use them. The hotel takes no responsibility for any injury, loss or damages that may occur when following the directions.

MODERATE

The Lake District has plenty of fells to tackle, but sometimes big isn't always the most beautiful. Hallin Fell is a case in point: at just 388 m, it's one of the smallest hills in the national park, and yet offers the very grandest of views. So if you're a first-time fell walker, or your time is short but you still want to experience a taste of the fells, there aren't many hikes that can measure up to Hallin Fell in the scenery stakes.
